YOUTHFUL DEPRAYITY.—Yesterday morning Wm. Turner, a colored boy who is employed at the Capitol, and a white boy, quarreled about the possession of a base ball, and the white boy produced a razor, began slashing around with it promiscuously and presently cut Turner across the hand and wrist in a fearful manner, severing one or two of the tendons. Dr. Wilson filled William full of stiches, and the white boy to use Jeff Davis' expression "evaporated." Turner was arrested by Officer McCally and locked up, but subsequently released and the other boy has not yet been found.

CARPENTERS' COMPLICATIONS.—The carpenters of this city held a large and protracted meeting at Crangle's building on Market street yesterday. There has been much dissatisjaction manifested lately by a great many of them with the wages paid them, and talks of a strike have been very frequent; indeed some of them have quit work in many instances. They demand an advance of 25 per cent over their present wages, which, as they now make $2.00 a day, would increase their pay to $2.50 per day. This advance mearly all the contractors and builders resist making, and frequent, indeed some of them have quit work in many instances. First ALARM TRIBGRAPH.—Mr. C. H. Pond, of New York, representing the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Company arrived in the city yesterday in response to an invitation of the Committee on Fire Department, to exhibit the practical operation of the fire telegraph.

The apparatus was put up in the Council Chamber, where it was in operation last evening, and where it will remain for two or three days in order to give all who desire an opportunity to see it. The who desire an opportunity to see it. The American Fire Alarm System owned by the Gamewell Company was the first one introduced in the United States, and for a long period had no competition what-ever. It has been proved to be reliable by its successful use in nearly one hun-dred of the leading cities of the Union durby its successful use in hearly one aundred of the leading cities of the Union during the last quarter of a century. While it is the father of fire alarm telegraphy not only in this but in foreign countries, it is not so old as to fail to procure every possible improvement which advancing science suggests for greater efficiency.

The company aim to make each successive system they put in superior to all previous ones. The alarm which they now offer Wheeling is of the most simple construction and is so arranged that even the unskilled cannot fail to give a proper alarm in case of fire. A fire occurring in any part of the city is instantly made known to the entire department by simply pulling a brass hook in the box door. The apparatus connected with the Capitol bell strikes the number of the box where the fire is located and any one in hearing of that bell can know precisely where the fire is located and any one in hearing of that bell can know precisely apparatus constructed so as to give the firemen in the house the alarm upon a apparatus constructed so as to give the firemen in the house the alarm upon a large gong bell simultaneously with the alarm upon the bell in the Capitol tower. The alarm system is entirely in the hands of the fire department and the chief marshall can summon or dismiss the various companies as the emergency may require. By the aid of an effective tele various companies as the emergency may require. By the aid of an effective tele-graph alarm, valuable time is saved in getting to the fire and often it is the case that a little promptness at the commence-ment of a fire will save a large conflagra-

The Committee last night requested Mr.
Pond to give an estimate for constructing the entire system, including the necessary

The Committee adjourned after request The Committee adjourned after requesting Mr. Pond to make a tour of the city and ascertain how much wire and how many poles it will require for the putting in of his system, and then how much it will cost the city ready for use. His death, which occurred on Wednesday, March 31, was peaceful, and his last years have left among friends in the East many pleasant memories, as did his previous life among those in this region. Dr. McClusky was a man of extraordinary energy of character, warmth of affections, and devotion to the high ends of the ministry of the gospel. GIBLS BROUGHT UP TO DO NOTHING .- Be ore the French revolution, the members of the roval family and the grand lords nd ladies never thought of doing anything for themselves that others could do gives a curious illustration of the effect of this enforced helplessness. In the course this enforced helplessness. In the course of a conversation with Mme Louise, the daughter of Louis XV, who was a Carmelite nun, Mme de Genlis said, "I should like to know what troubled you most in getting accustomed to your new profession." "You could never imagine." she replied. "It was the descent of a small flight of steps alone by myself. At first it seemed to me a dreadful precipice, and I was obliged to sit down on the steps and slide down in that attitude." The princess had never descended any staircase save the grand one at Versallles, and only that while leaning on the arm of a noble cavaller. The steep and winding steps of the while learning on the arm of a nonle cava-lier. The steep and winding steps of the convent, therefore, seemed appalling when she had to descend them alone. A story is told of the Duchess of Edinburg, the daughter of the czar of Russia, which ex-hibits a similar training. Shortly after her marriage with Victoria's son, the duc-hess was entertained at a nobleman's house hess was entertained at a nobleman's house A party was made up to visit the extensive greenhouses, the duchess leading, as was her right, the way. In passing up the narrow aisle of one of the houses, the royal lady came to a closed door. The passage was too narrow for any of her suite to pass her and open the door, and she stood as motionless as a statue. "Oblige me," said the duke in a whisper, "by sending some one around to open the by sending some one around to open the loor from the other side, for she'll not door from the other side, for she'll not yo open it if she stands there for a month."

It may excite a smile to read such illustrations as these of the physical helplesshees in the stands there is smillar in kind, if not in degree, marks a many American families. In a recent sermon, the Rev Washington Gladden of Springfield, Mass., spoke of the fact that a some American girls are brought up to dearn nothing and do nothing. He referred to one woman who was proud that the daughter never did any sweeping, and to another who never let her daughter to any kitchen work. Such training must foster selfishness and indolence, and of a loss both of respect; and of true regard for others.—Youth's Companion.
